Chapter 1 by Arindam Sain

It was the time of our college sports fest a time when students from different colleges visited our campus for taking part in different events. She came to take part in basketball event. She was the captain of her team. She showed a great piece of game. she was looking just ecstatic in her pink jersey. I think I was the only person from my college supporting her team instead of our college's team. She must have taken note of this as I found her cheering for me when I stroked an equalizer against their college's team in the football match a day after. After the match I went to her and asked her if we could be friends. She joyfully accepted my proposal. That night we went out for a dinner and both of us started enjoying each other's company. But alas the next day was the last day of the fest and she would be leaving by tomorrow evening.
